Abstract: Children, particularly those with special needs (such as intellectual disabilities, attention deficit disorder, autistic spectrum disorders), can require considerable help in learning how to relate to other people and how to behave positively and appropriately in social situations. In this book, the author emphasises the benefits that learning communication and social skills can have for these children, including better friendships and increased self-esteem. The numerous detailed tasks and practical examples enable parents, professionals and carers to work with children on improving their social skills and social awareness, and respecting themselves and other people. Topics covered include: Helping children with special needs; making and keeping friends; social rules; body language; feelings, including shyness and anger; listening skills and social safety. This book is suitable for use with children aged 7-16, on a one-to-one basis or in small groups.
